Help Keep our Roadways Safe

The Tollway is supporting safety legislation that would enhance penalties for dangerous driving in work zones to promote safety and deter reckless and irresponsible driving.

Illinois averages about 4,800 work zone crashes annually, according to the Illinois Department of Transportation. This year, 14 people have died in work zone crashes, including the September 14 fatality involving a construction worker on the Tri-State Tollway (I-294).

We need your help, too. If you see someone neglecting work zone safety, call *999 and let us know #SeeOrangeSlowDown

Did You Know? Question and Answer Corner

Question: When do work zone speed limits apply?

Answer: In work zones, drivers are required to adjust their speed based on the posted speed limits, rather than the presence of construction barrels, barricades or workers.

In areas where the Tollway is doing short-term, overnight lane closures, temporary work zone speed limit signs will be posted and drivers must follow those speed limits. Those signs will be removed after the work is completed.
